GERMANS LOSE 2,500 DEAD IN CRIMEA BATTLE

U. S. Headquarters Report
Troops Storm Deeper Into Sevastopol Defenses.

By The Associated Press
Allied field headquarters today reported that German troops had stormed deeper into the defenses of Sevastopol, the Russian stronghold in the Crimea. The Russians said they had repulsed the attack with heavy losses, but they admitted that the battle had been a tactical draw.

The battle was fought on a narrow strip of land, and the Germans were unable to break through the Russian defenses. The Russians, however, were unable to break through the German defenses either.

The battle was a tactical draw, but it was a heavy one. The Germans lost 2,500 men, and the Russians lost 2,000 men. The battle was fought on a narrow strip of land, and the Germans were unable to break through the Russian defenses.

Marion Women Train for War Factory Jobs

45 Women Study Mechanical Work at Harding Shop

BY HALLIE HOUCK
The hand that rocks the cradle is busy these days learning to operate machinery that will help rock the Axis off its base.

Some 45 women are working day and night at the Harding High school vocational shop, learning to be mechanics and welders. Their ages range up to 48 and some are mothers of small children.

They, the board of education and L. H. Reiker, vocational coordinator, and his staff, realizing the tremendous need for trained mechanics and welders upon whom the responsibility for winning or losing the war may depend, are cooperating to the limit with the federal program of all-out production for defense.

The Harding shop is the only shop in a 20-county area that is teaching women the industrial "art" of electric welding. It was revealed here recently when Arthur M. Howard of Columbus, head of district WPA training and employment division. In the area covered by his office other vocational shops are offering training to women, but the welding instruction is limited to the acetylene type, he said.

One-half of the women in the Harding shop are from the rolls of the local office of the United States Employment Service and the other half are from the WPA rolls.

They were carefully selected by the USES and the WPA. The WPA employees are paid regular security wages while attending classes.

The women are not being pampered in their three-month course. They don't work clothes, generally heavy coveralls, bandanas, cap or tightly wound bandana, and get just as grimy, just as sweaty as the men and high school boys in the shop.

NAVY REPORTS FIRST SINKING IN NORTHWEST

U. S. Merchant Ship Sent Down in Area Not Previously Visited by Subs.

By The Associated Press
A WEST COAST PORT, June 10—The first torpedoing of a U. S. merchant ship off the coast of the Pacific northwest, officially announced by the navy last night, was disclosed after the ship's master, Captain Lyle L. Havens, 48, San Carlos, Calif., brought his crew men here and said "I'm glad to report we lost only one of the 60 aboard."

Stephen Chance, 56, Negro second cook and baker, died of exposure in a lifeboat.

Eight men were hurt, two seriously. The explosion occurred last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. when the ship was about 100 miles off the coast of Washington state.

The explosion smashed one of two lifeboats, Captain Havens said, but the entire personnel got away in the remaining lifeboat and two life rafts within 10 minutes.

He said the attack occurred about 2:30 p. m. (Pacific war time) Sunday. The lifeboat started to sink at dawn Monday after "hanging around the scene on the chance some one heard our SOS. It seems the explosion wrecked the wireless and no one could hear it."

The lifeboat, towed by a passing fishing boat, reached a haven Monday night and gave the position of the two life rafts. Allied planes and a corvette found the rafts and their survivors yesterday.

The Pacific torpedoing and the sinking of a Norwegian vessel in the Western Atlantic brought the announced toll of submarine-sunk allied and neutral ships to 232 today, counting those lost in both areas.

Meanwhile an indication of the staggering cost in money of the sinkings came from the American Institute of Marine Underwriters, which announced yesterday that insurance companies had lost $48,480,000 on marine insurance policies in the first six months of this year.

The Atlantic sinking war the 25th officially announced since Dec. 7 and the fourth reported by the navy this week for that area.

$5 Auto Use Stamps on Sale

Supply of 4,000 at Marion Post Office; Must Be Purchased Before July 1.

Four thousand auto use tax stamps were placed on sale this morning at the stamp window in the Marion post office.

The $5 stamps will evidence payment of the tax for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and must be purchased on or before that date, Harry F. Bussey, collector of internal revenue, announced today in Columbus.

The red stamps will replace the green ones now on automobiles and should be pasted on the lower right hand corner of the windshield of every motor vehicle.

The stamps are serially numbered, gummed on the face and there is provision on the back for the entry of the make, model, serial number and state license number of the vehicle.

Collector Bussey said he had been advised by the office of price administration that in the issuance and use of gasoline rationing books, an important identification will be the serial number. The stamps are being sold for cash only and no mail orders will be accepted at the post office. Because revenue stamps have an intrinsic value, unexpired checks will not be accepted.

State Replies To Complaint About Marion Night Clubs

Ohio Liquor Director Comments on Inquiry Made by Police Chief; Inspector Sent Here.

The outcome of the investigation of two Marion night clubs, operated by Acting City Solicitor Russell Wilhelm, appeared uncertain today as officials of the state department of liquor control in Columbus sent their own investigator here for a check-up.

In a letter addressed to Jacob B. Tyle, director of the state department of liquor control, Police Chief William Marks yesterday asked for an explanation of the issuance of liquor permits to the Mayfair and Royal night clubs, which neither apparently was complying with the requirements that made them available at such places of business.

In a statement issued in Columbus today, Director Taylor said the original permit issuance investigation for both night clubs was made by L. L. Lehman of the state department and showed that the kitchen equipment was installed in both places. He said the investigation for the renewal of the permit was made May 21 and the renewal permit was made March 4.

Supervisor's Comment
George Hinklin, formerly of Marion, now district supervisor for the state department of liquor control, said Police Chief Marks' department all during its investigation and gave his approval to the issuance. Mr. Hinklin said Chief Marks remarked, however, that he did not approve of the Royal night club itself.

Mr. Hinklin also reported that Cleveland stockholders of the Mayfair night club were checked before the issuance of the permit and that they were found to be entirely satisfactory.

Director Taylor said that "if they (the night clubs) had kitchen equipment and have disposed of it, then they will certainly be brought before the board."

"If they are not serving meals," Mr. Hinklin said, "then it requires our immediate attention."

Mr. Hinklin added that he personally knows the Royal cafe was serving meals immediately after its permit was renewed March 4 because he was in there on a routine check-up.

Inspector Earl Cullison is in Marion today conducting a special investigation of both night clubs.

Proponents of both clubs, when contacted today for a statement, said as far as they know they are not violating any clause of their permit contract.

James Drumpey, speaking for the operators of the Mayfair, said their establishment has always been equipped with a hot plate and is prepared to serve food whenever it is asked for.

John Bender, who is now operating the Royal night club, said he is transferring the permit from the name of a former owner to his own and announced his place of business definitely will be prepared to serve meals regularly. He said he has already made installations of kitchen equipment and that no violation of the permit is intended.

The text of the letter sent by Chief Marks to the state liquor department about the two night clubs follows. It was dated as of yesterday and was addressed to Director Taylor:

"This department had several complaints concerning the above two dealers. The Mayfair Night Club opened here on May 21, 1942, operating a night club under a night club license issued by your department. An investigation by this department reveals the fact that at the time this night club opened, it had no kitchen or other facilities for the serving of meals; that it was not in fact a restaurant and is not now, operating anything faintly resembling a restaurant. This place has no kitchen, and so far as we have been able to learn does not even have a stove and advises its customers that they do not serve meals.

"Our investigation of the Royal Night Club of this city, also reveals that no meals or food of any kind is being served or available at this night club, and men from our department who investigated were informed that no meals were served and that they served nothing but drinks."

"In brief, neither one of these night clubs is even making a pretense of operating a restaurant or of serving food in any way. It has long been the understanding of this department that liquor dealers license of any kind were not issued to any place except places engaged in a bona fide restaurant business. It is our further understanding that no other house dealers in Marion was able to secure a license of this kind until they had installed and were operating a kitchen or a bona fide restaurant business."

ACKNOWLEDGE SINKING OF ONE PLANE CARRIER

Tokyo Radio Reports Attack by Troops on America's Aleutian Islands.

By The Associated Press
Imperial Tokyo headquarters sought to minimize the gravity of the Japanese naval disaster at Midway today but acknowledged that United States forces had sunk an aircraft carrier, heavily damaged another carrier and damaged a cruiser.

Official United States reports have listed 16 and possibly 18 Japanese warships sunk or damaged before the enemy fleet limped off into retreat.

Moreover, an eye-witness account by Ensign George H. Gay Jr., 25-year-old U. S. navy flier, declared three of Japan's aircraft carriers, including two of the 28,000-ton Kaga-Akagi class, were seen to burst into flames under attack by American torpedo planes. Tokyo did not specify the class of the carrier it admitted lost.

Tokyo headquarters also reported that Japanese army troops were used in attacking the U. S.-owned Aleutian islands off Alaska on Sunday, Tokyo time, (Saturday, Alaska time)—three days after the Dutch Harbor raids—and declared they are continuing operations in this area.

No Details Given
No details were given as to whether it was a sizeable invasion of the strategic chain of islands which stretch across the Bering sea from Alaska toward Japan.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the U. S. Pacific fleet, described the situation in the far north as "confused" several days ago, but there has been no hint from any source other than Tokyo of any Japanese troop landings in the Aleutians.

"On June 7," a Japanese communiqué said, "naval units in closest cooperation with troops of the army destroyed a number of enemy positions on the Aleutian Islands and are continuing the operations in this area."

Japanese planes raided Dutch Harbor in the Aleutians on Wednesday, June 3.

A navy spokesman in Washington countered axis claims of Japanese occupation of Aleutian islands bases with a categorical assertion that "None of our inhabited areas, islands or rocks are troubled with uninvited visitors up to this time."

Asked for comment on axis claims that army forces had destroyed positions on the Aleutian Islands, the spokesman said "We have no information about any Japanese on Aleutian soil. Certainly none of our inhabited areas, islands or rocks are troubled with uninvited visitors up to this time."

Belatedly lifting the veil of its secrecy on the battle of Midway and the Japanese command gave its first account of the conflict, with its score sheet bearing no relation to the account of staggering Japanese naval losses as reported by United States war bulletins.

The Tokyo communiqué acknowledged the loss of only a single Japanese aircraft carrier and damage to two other warships, while claiming that two U. S. aircraft carriers and a large transport were sunk.

Here are the contrasting tallies:

Japanese Claims
U. S. losses: sunk, two 19,000-ton carriers; shot down, 131 planes.

Japanese losses: sunk, one carrier; damaged, one carrier, one cruiser; missing, 25 planes.

United States Claims
U. S. losses: sunk, one destroyer; damaged, one carrier, one cruiser; missing, two planes.

Japanese losses: sunk, two and possibly three carriers, one destroyer; damaged, three battleships, eight to 11 other ships.

Tokyo headquarters said two U. S. aircraft carriers of the Enterprise and Hornet types, each normally carrying 2,072 men and about 100 planes, were sent to the bottom in the battle off Midway Island. The U. S. transport was listed as sunk at Dutch Harbor.

The Japanese command said its naval forces attacked not only the U. S. naval base at Dutch Harbor but also "the whole group of the Aleutians," and continued these attacks on the enemy positions on June 4 and 5.

In breaking its long silence, Imperial headquarters dismissed the three-day battle of Midway as a brief but heavy assault on a single day, June 5, which "inflicted heavy damage on enemy naval units and naval air force establishments."

Significantly, however, the Japanese did not mention the sinking of the U. S. aircraft carrier.

German Lives Cheap As Nazi Judges Deal Death Sentences

Execution Is Penalty for Many, Violations: It's Hard Labor for Others.

By Jan 12 one man, Karl Sachs of Fulda, had been condemned to death and executed at Kassel for pilfering furs.

On Feb. 15 we learned of the execution of Johann Walter, a 24-year-old Vienna clothes thief. Two persons who aided him were sentenced to 15 and 12 years hard labor respectively.

The next day the press announced the execution of seven Germans who committed thefts during blackouts.

Two Industrialists Seized

There followed an announcement to the effect that two Berlin capitalists of industry had been yanked into a concentration camp because they assigned several laborers in their munitions plants to do chores for them in their private homes. There was also published the story of a Frankfurt merchant who had 18,000 reichsmarks stolen from his safe. He was fined 18,000 marks and sentenced to three months in jail for hoarding money.

During March and April the Frankfurt Zeitung, which the Bad Nauheim internets were permitted to read, repeatedly published stories of heavy fines imposed for profiteering—stories obviously intended as a warning.

Johannes Zulauf was found guilty in Kassel court of killing four pigs and one calf in violation of regulations. He was sentenced to three years. Five citizens of Koblenz were given sentences varying from six to two months and heavy money fines for killing one pig surreptitiously.

The Frankfurt Zeitung of April 9 and 10 devoted two columns to detailed stories of three, two and one year penitentiary sentences imposed on war profiteers.

Death Penalty Extended

The list of offenses punishable by death was extended in two important directions during the middle of April.

Heads of firms working on war contracts which made false returns regarding the number of laborers available in their plants, or regarding the raw materials in stock or ordered for fulfilling any assigned contract, were warned that death or the penitentiary is in store for them. They were given a short respite during which they might confess past sins, in which case these transgressions would not be charged up against them.

From explanatory articles it appeared that some firms, having learned from experience that the priorities boards will never grant them what they asked in the way of raw materials, arbitrarily demanded much more than they needed, in expectation of being cut down to actual needs anyway.

At times, however, through some bureaucratic error the full quantity asked for was awarded, with the result that the excess was used by the manufacturer to turn out highly priced civilian goods at great profit to himself.

Industrialists also were in the habit of asking for more men from the labor exchanges than the actual wartime needs justified.

The death decree is to put an end to such practices.

Judges Warned

Another decree provided the death penalty in extreme cases of a person's aggregating to himself prerogatives or functions belonging to government officials, officers of the armed forces, or the Nazi party hierarchy.

There were judges nevertheless in Germany, it appears—especially the Nazi hold-overs—who lacked the severity deemed necessary by Adolf Hitler for the absolutist government of a people.

Hence, in his reichstag speech of April 26 he demanded—and, of course, obtained without dissenting vote—extraordinary powers to set aside all process of law and himself to act as prosecutor, judge, jury and witness.

It is expected that judges now will be much more assiduous in handing out heavy sentences. For it goes without saying that any judge who is sacked by Hitler in case he further finds it necessary to go over his head and judge the case and fix the penalty himself.

CREW OF HOUSTON LAUDED BY SKIPPER

Merchant Ship Captain Tells of Heroic Battle.

WASHINGTON, June 10 — A new testimonial to the heroic conduct of the officers and crew of the lost American cruiser Houston came from a merchant ship skipper whose own survival may be attributed to the fighting spirit of the men on the cruiser.

The skipper was Captain Frederick E. Trask of Oakland, Calif., whose ship was in a convoy in the Western Pacific last February. He reported that when Japanese planes attacked the United Nations vessels on Feb. 16 three twin-engined bombers were shot down, two four-engined bombers were destroyed and eight twin-engined planes were damaged. All the twin-engined ships were hit by anti-aircraft fire from the Houston in a period of 45 minutes.

The previous afternoon a Japanese seaplane had been hit by Houston's anti-aircraft fire and forced to crash into the sea.

Trask said that the Houston was attacked on the morning of Feb. 16 with "what we assumed were half-ton bombs." After the cruiser's "successful" resistance, with other smaller naval vessels getting in a "few licks now and then," Trask added, the Japs began attacking merchant ships presumably with 250-pound bombs.

About two weeks later, after the great battle of Java sea, the Houston disappeared.

Captain Trask's ship reached Darwin, Australia, safely but was bombed and sunk in the harbor there.

By The Associated Press
MAY, OKLA., June 10—Artificial respiration applied by friends has kept the spark of life burning five months—night and day—in Mason Williams, 49-year-old school teacher.

To stop pumping breath into a wasted body would mean a lingering suffocating death.

Dr. Frank Veroni, Jay Physician, said Williams was suffering from a disease causing paralysis of the muscles used in breathing.

When Williams began to lose control of his respiratory system, artificial respiration was applied. One of his friends volunteered to help and for five months they were kept at it, working in rotation.

Dr. Veroni said Williams' ability to breathe has been impaired about 75 per cent. Without artificial respiration he cannot speak or swallow.

CHAPTER 25

Proposal

It was late when Kathleen returned to Linville. And when she reached her uncle's car in the driveway she saw Joe's car parked a little way ahead. She felt that sense of something new. Now that she knew that she was to appear in the summer theater people, she felt that she was doing something even more than she had done before.

"Sweetheart!" he greeted her. "I've been waiting for you."

"I've been waiting for you," said Kathleen. "Any time."

"I wanted to remind you that I still love you—and that I still want you to become my wife."

"Heavens, Joe—are you serious?"

"I never stopped yet—only I kept silent. Actually I've been waiting for you to stop a minute."

"That's the reason you play along getting your play written?"

"Joe opened the gate to the yard. Kathleen entered the yard. I really came by for was to ask you for a date tonight."

"Joe, I've got to study," said Kathleen. "You know that. You heard Paul tell me he would have my part for me today."

"Yes, heard him. Did he keep his word?"

"Of course he did." Kathleen patted her bag. "I've got the part right here."

Joe felt a sinking sensation. He had to admit then and there—at least to himself—that all along he had been hoping that Paul would back out in the end, would make some sort of excuse, and that Kathleen would never get the part. And now here she stood facing him, the script in her bag. "Couldn't me see a movie?" he persisted.

"No, tonight, Joe, I want to settle down and familiarize myself with the girl I'm to portray."

"You could do that after-wards."

"Perhaps—but"—Kathleen's eyes brightened—"I tell you what you can do, Joe. You can give me my cues while I'm studying."

"Swell way to spend an evening, I must say."

"Come on in to supper," Kathleen said. "Lizzie'll feed you food, and you can feed me cues."

Cueing Kathleen.

Joe hesitated a moment. "Oh, well," he said, "what's there to lose?"

He went up the walk with Kathleen. Lizzie, in the front hall, saw them.

"Oh," she said, smiling from ear to ear, "they're done made up again!"

"Lizzie, Mr. Joe's staying for supper," Kathleen said.

"I hope the notice isn't too short, Lizzie," said Joe.

"Lawdy, Mr. Joe, you ain't never no trouble!" Lizzie hustled out to the kitchen, singing. "There's rold pavements under mah feet!"

She remained in high spirits, even when she was told that there would be another unexpected guest for supper—Mr. Frank Vaughan having arrived with Ruby Howard.

"I thumbed a ride," he told Kathleen and Joe.

"And I was delighted to stop at the sign of the wiggling thumb," Ruby laughed. "I needed company that had nothing whatsoever to do with the theater."

"And I needed company that had nothing whatsoever to do with real estate," said Uncle Frank.

"That being the case," said Joe, "you two ought to hit it off swell together."

"We do," said Ruby. "Don't we, Mr. Frank?"

"Yes," said Uncle Frank, "we do."

Lizzie called them to supper just then.

Later, when the meal was over, Uncle Frank took Ruby's arm and went with her out through the rear hall. Kathleen and Joe lingered at the table.

"She's an awfully nice person, I think," said Joe. "Sometimes, she doesn't seem a bit like an actress."

"Is that why you think she's an awfully nice person?" Kathleen asked.

"In a way, yes," said Joe. "Funny thing, but I keep thinking she's falling for your uncle. Wouldn't it be romantic and exciting if they got married—and Ruby stayed on in Linville?"

"Good lord, Joe, you don't think for a moment that an actress like Ruby would give up her career for life here, do you?"

"Why not? She could go far and do worse."

"Silly!" Kathleen got up. "Come on out on the porch, Joe. I want you to hear my part."

Among The Chickens

He followed Kathleen out to the porch and sat down beside her in the swing. Kathleen took the sheets from her bag.

"You read these parts of lines," she said. "They don't make much sense, but they give me my cue."

"Yes," said Joe.

"You sound just like Lizzie," Kathleen said, moving closer to him. "Here, we can read together."

And while Joe cued and Kathleen read, Uncle Frank and Ruby strolled about among the chickens.

"They're lovely," Ruby said. "I know you're going to walk away with all the prizes at the Fair. She watched a handsome rooster strutting among a number of equally handsome hens. 'I've never in my life been to a County Fair. It must be fun.'"

"I is," said Uncle Frank. "Would you like to attend one?"

"I certainly would."

"Then why not come to ours in October? The Linville County Fair is usually a pretty fine one."

"How on earth can I manage that?" said Ruby. "Don't forget I'm a working girl, and have to keep acting if I eat."

"Why not give up the stage—for a while, anyway—and stay here with us, with Kathleen and me?" said Uncle Frank. "Do you good to go on being bucolic. The autumn out here is bracing and beautiful."

"Frank Vaughan, you're a darling!" said Ruby.

"You mean you like me a little?"

"I like you a lot!" Ruby slipped her hand through his arm and snuggled up to him. "You're just about the nicest man I've ever known."

"I'm glad," said Uncle Frank. "But don't stand so close—if you don't want to be kissed."

Ruby didn't move a fraction of an inch—so, of course, Uncle Frank kissed her.

That romantic scene among the chickens did things to Ruby Howard. They were things she found difficulty in explaining to herself, and couldn't possibly have explained to anyone else. She was now like one who knew there was a haven in the storm—a friendly port, should her boat find the going too rough and discouraging.

WHITE gladioli and carnations decorated the Mary Anne church for the wedding of Miss Mary Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Aye of 277 W. Vernon avenue, and Dr. Jerome J. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Brown of 521 East Haven avenue.

The marriage, which was solemnized at 9:30 o'clock with Rev. William J. Spickard officiating, was the wedding of the bride's parents.

The St. Mary school choir sang the Mass of the Holy Rosary and during the ceremony Miss Jane Starnes of New York, N. Y., sang Gounod's "Ave Maria." The processional and recessional were played by Miss Rose Marie.

The bride was given in holy matrimony to her groom by her father, Dr. Jerome J. Brown. The bride wore a gown of the same color. The dress was fashioned with a full skirt and long train, square neckline edged with tulle, long sleeves and long wrist-length gloves.

Her only jewelry was a gold cross, a family heirloom that first belonged to her paternal grandfather, and a hundred-year-old gold bracelet loaned by a close friend of the family.

She carried a white prayer book, which was pinned to a white orchid and shower of stephanotis, a handkerchief made from her mother's wedding dress, and a rock crystal rosary, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Barbara Aye was her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. Bernard R. Smith and Mrs. Robert A. Aye, cousin and sister-in-law of the bride, were bridesmaids. Their dresses were white marquisette and lace fashioned with a full skirt, wrist-length sleeves and sweetheart neckline. Each wore a veil fastened with flowers matching those in her bouquet; and a double strand necklace of pearls, the gift of the bride.

Miss Aye carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies and blue delphinium and the bridesmaids carried similar ones of white daisies and pink roses.

Donald D. Brown of Columbus, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Robert A. Aye, Bernard R. Smith, Dr. William Funnery of Kenton and John W. Lusch, Jr.

Mrs. Aye chose a costume suit of green crepe for her daughter's wedding. Her accessories were of white and her flowers were white carnations.

Mrs. Brown's dress was blue and white made in a shimmering style. Her accessories were white and her flowers, pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast for 50 close friends and relatives was held at the Marion Country Club. Decorating the bride's table was a large wedding cake, and white roses. Cut flowers throughout the club added to the decorative note.

Assisting at the breakfast were Mrs. Mary Rita Murphy, Miss Catherine Garcon, Miss Elizabeth Gray, Mrs. Daniel M. Murphy, Miss Barbara Aye, Mrs. Bernard Smith, Mrs. Robert Aye and Mrs. M. C. Goss.

Following a trip through Michigan they will be at home at 416 1/2 East Church street. For traveling the new Mrs. Brown wore bric-a-brac print of aqua Cusick, Miss Mary Ann Cusick, Gene Cusick and William Cusick of Mansfield; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Aye, Jr., and Mrs. F. A. Koehl of Saint Marys; Miss Jane Starnes of New York, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Brown of Cincinnati; Miss Philomena Kieck, Edward Kling, Thomas Cusick, Miss Evelyn Cusick, Miss Thelma Cusick, and Miss Rosetta Gerber of Toledo; Miss Minnie Gerber of Delaware; Mr. and Mrs. John Helgel of Washington, D. Mr. and Mrs. Aye entertained members of the wedding party at a rehearsal dinner at their home on Mt. Vernon avenue Tuesday evening.

MRS. HENRY GILMORE, formerly Miss Verna Babcock, was complimented with a miscellaneous shower last evening by Mrs. Ida Keller and Miss Mildred Kenyon at the latter's home at 319 Blaine avenue. Mrs. Gilmore is the wife of Private Henry Gilmore, who is stationed at Patterson Field, Dayton.

Following a season of bunco, in which Mrs. Wayne Anthony and Miss James Osmun won awards, the hostesses served lunch at a table with a centerpiece and favors in Mrs. Gilmore's colors of blue and yellow.

JO ANN SAYERS achieves turban effect with hair band.

Remember the old-fashioned switch with which Grandma used to embellish her crowning glory?

Well, it's back in style again, only now they call it a "band-o-hair" and use it in new and ingenious ways.

If your hairdresser grew too enthusiastic about your new short haircut, you can cover the damage with an oiling hair-piece that exactly matches your own short locks and adapts itself to curls, buns or bangs with equal ease.

Added hair pieces can solve many of your problems. The day you go swimming, with no time to be prepped at the hair-dresser's before you don your long skirt for the evening, all you do is pin on curls which look as if they grew from your own head. Presto—no one can detect that your hair has been through the ravages of sun, water and sand.

There are dozens of ways to dress hair with a luxurious sweep of hair, even if you're butter-fingered. It consists of two long bands of hair deftly joined together with a natural looking twist. Made with a bow-shaped smoked foundation, it fits snugly and securely even on the shortest hair. For a regal evening coiffure, you can wear it as a braided coronet or have a smart chignon effect by a simple twist at the nape of your neck.

SCHOOL CLOSINGS PREDICTED IN OHIO

Hill Forecasts Consolidations in Some Cities.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 10—Many of Ohio's city schools may be closed next fall and their classes consolidated with those in nearby buildings, a state department of education official indicated today.

J. O. Hill, assistant education director, said the proposal being discussed in Toledo—closing of 10 schools to save money—might spread to other areas because of a decline in the number of pupils and possible teacher shortages.

Hill commented that it would be "good business" to shut down buildings not operating at capacity. If consolidations could be effected.

He reported that the birth rate decline of 12 to 15 years ago was being felt and that some schools were not filling classrooms, while youths wanting to work find jobs readily.

A shortage of teachers may develop with further expansion of the armed forces, Hill asserted, although the present supply is adequate except in classifications such as agriculture and shop training.

Many boards resented previous regulations against employing married women. Wives of men in the services are being given preference, Hill declared.

Columbus Council Plans Expense Curtailments By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., June 10—City council planned to meet tonight to map drastic curtailments in operating expenses after a vote of more than four to one a charter amendment to provide operating funds for the police and fire departments this year and next.

The amendment, which would have given council authority to levy a 2.5 mill real estate tax in 1942 and 1943, was defeated yesterday by a vote of 5,985 for to 25,835 against. The levy would have given the city an estimated $900,000 revenue each year.

Mayor Floyd F. Green, who prepared a retrenchment program for representation to council, announced "we will operate as best we can with what funds are available. We will retain as many employees as possible, although layoffs may run as high as 500."

To make up for the loss of the Altrusa potash deposits French interests are exploring deposits that have been discovered in western France.

Bombing Attacks Help Answer Call for Second Front

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Wide World War Analyst

Britain's unprecedented big-scale bombings of Hitler's domains in Western Europe, undoubtedly are fulfilling many of the requirements that would be expected of the second-land-front for which a lot of people in the allied countries have been clamoring as an immediate aid to Russia.

But this doesn't mean the land offensive should be dispensed with. The second front will come in due course.

Still, this terrific aerial bombardment represents one of the war's most important developments and adds weight to this recent prediction of Britain's Air Chief Marshal A. T. Harris:

"A lot of people, generally those with no qualifications to speak (if I think), are in the habit of reiterating the silly phrase: 'bombing can never win a war.' We shall see. It hasn't been tried yet and Germany, more and more desperately clinging to her wide-spread conquests and still foolishly striving for more, will make a most interesting subject for the initial experiment. Japan can be used to provide the confirmation, but don't expect too much just yet. There is work to do first—and a great deal of it."

This is a rapidly changing war, in which science is producing quick shifts. The advance in the striking-power of the air arms is one of the most remarkable.

We can't afford to base judgment on past air performances. For instance, at the outset of the war there were those in high positions who scoffed at the idea that warships, especially battleships, were vulnerable to air attack. For a fine demonstration of what air power can do, check our big victory at Midway.

WORLD WAR I HERO TO SERVE THIRD TIME

ENSIGN IN HOSPITAL TELLS OF BATTLE

Recuperating in a Honolulu hospital, Ensign George H. Gay tells a newspaper account of his dramatic experience, that of watching the great naval battle between Jap and U. S. forces at Midway island while floating on a rubber lifeboat after his plane had been shot down.

Ensign Gay said the other day, "I don't add up. Production is what our government and our boys at the front must have. Look at these women in their first classes—and it goes just as well for the men who are just learning—there've been training since the middle of April. They're not ready by a long way to go into a shop and be efficient. It will take at least six more weeks training to fit them to work in a shop."

Women Train for War Factory Jobs

One man said if he had to employ women he'd train them. Mr. Ricker said the other day, "I don't add up. Production is what our government and our boys at the front must have. Look at these women in their first classes—and it goes just as well for the men who are just learning—there've been training since the middle of April. They're not ready by a long way to go into a shop and be efficient. It will take at least six more weeks training to fit them to work in a shop."

"No industry in these days can afford to take the time that it used to take to train employees. They just don't have that much time on the war production schedule. We've got the time, we have the facilities, we give all our time to teaching."

That the women are completely serious about their training is proved by the hours they work at the shop.

One welding class works from 12 midnight to 6 a. m. under the direction of Herbert Claymiller. A machine shop class comes in at 5:15 a. m. and works until 11:15 a. m. taught by Bert Waters. At 12:15 p. m. a third class comes in for welding, under the direction of Wayne Hirsch, and works until 6:15 p. m. The fourth class of the round-the-clock schedule starts at 11 p. m. in the machine shop, under the direction of Mr. Waters, and works until 5 a. m.

Mr. Hirsch said the other afternoon that in some ways he'd rather teach women than men. He explained his statement by saying that when women start the training they freely admit they don't know anything about welding.

RUSSIA

for every foot of soil in the five-day-old Sevastopol offensive.)

The Soviet information bureau's communique indicated the current offensive threat might be the gravest in a series of threats which were previously reported to have cost Adolf Hitler's command 50,000 dead.

More than 1,000 of the invaders were reported to have fallen in new engagements on the Kalinin and Leningrad fronts, far to the north.

African Front

On the North African front, both the German and Italian communiques acknowledged that Gen. Neil Ritchie's armies, supported by American-made tanks and planes, were heavily counterattacking.

British Imperial Headquarters said an eleven Axis assault on Bir Hacheim, southern anchor of the 50-mile British defense line, had been driven off despite the fact that German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel threw in "an increased number of tanks, dive bombers, infantry and artillery."

British armored and motorized columns bolstered the Free French garrison in repelling the attack.

British mobile columns were reported hacking steadily at Rommel's vital supply lines across the main battle sector around Tobruk.

For the first time, the British disclosed that United States built bombers (Glenn Martin 1874) have gone into action in the Libyan desert struggle, executing "daring daylight raids" on an axis airbase at Brega.

"The bombing was particularly accurate and effective," a communique said.

As the battle swirled indecisively under a broiling sun, RAF bombers attacked the big Italian naval base at Taranto for the second successive night.

An Italian communique said known casualties totaled 20 killed, 78 injured and acknowledged that "several" planes had been shot down.

On the English channel front, the RAF destroyed German shipping off the coast of Germany, sinking a freighter and a minesweeper.

GERMANS OPEN NEW WAVE OF SLAYINGS

275 Czechs Already Killed for Heydrich Death

By The Associated Press
BERN, Switzerland, June 10—With 275 Czechs already slain in retaliation, the Germans made known today that the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich would mark the beginning of new, sweeping punitive measures not only in dismembered Czechoslovakia but throughout all the restive occupied countries.

Continuing attacks against occupied areas in the north, west and east confront Germany with a potential second or third front and require vigorous counter-action, dispatches from Berlin said.

Prague, Paris, Amsterdam, and all Poland and Yugoslavia were regarded here as likely to feel the effects of the increased death penalties.

Executions up to now have been averaging ten a day in occupied France. Czechs have been shot in groups of 25 or more at a time since the attack which took the life of Heydrich.

Figures of the toll being taken in occupied Yugoslavia rarely are seen in print, but travelers tell of talking to persons on trains who offered to act as guides to villages where virtually the entire population has been wiped out because partisans were found to have been quartered there.

LIGHTS OUT FOR SIX HOURS IN EAST END

Falling Branches Cause Short Circuit, Disrupting Service.

East Center street had its own blackout last night, a six-hour and 15-minute interim.

The blacked out area extended from just east of Charles street to the city limits. No street lights and no home lights shone from 9:45 last night until 3:30 this morning, except for a brief interval around midnight.

Wet tree limbs fell on the wires at three places along Center street, grounding the current, and causing the disruption, an official of the Marion-Inner Power Co. said this morning.

Around midnight the repair crew had effected repairs and were off duty when the current went off again.

Residents along the street brought candles and flashlights to use to get around in their homes. Those who had no "black-out" equipment spent the evening in Stygian darkness.

JAPANESE

news for the first time did not claim victory over the U. S. naval forces which Tokyo many weeks ago declared were "wiped out."

This Japanese announcement on the naval battles off Midway island and Dutch Harbor was the first acknowledgment from Tokyo even that such encounters had taken place.

Circumstances which cast suspicion on it included:

First of all, Tokyo's searoom sheet bore no relation to the facts as they have been given not only in official United States war bulletins but also by the eye-witness account of Ensign George H. Gay Jr., of Houston, Tex., who saw three Japanese aircraft carriers burst into flame while he drifted on the sea in the battle area.

The Japanese account, indicating that the action at Midway was only a quickly-ended naval bombardment, apparently leaves a glaring gap. United States communiques have pointed out that a line of transports was along with the strong Japanese armada and these ships would have been present only if a landing operation were intended.

There had been prior indications—including Tokyo's long silence—that Japan's fleet was giving Tokyo no success story to report.

Although nothing on the battle had appeared until today in Japan's own propaganda channels, the Berlin radio broadcast an item yesterday from the Tokyo newspaper Asahi in which an unidentified "admiral" warned that Japan cannot always expect victory.

The record alone casts doubt on Japan's veracity. The case of the United States cruiser Markham, for example, is one where the test does not depend on rival communiques. The Japanese announced last March that the Markham was sunk in the Indian ocean and, in April, the Tokyo spokesman said specifically she had gone down off Java.

Since then, the Markham, battered but very much afloat, has reached a United States base under her own power after a 13,000-mile voyage.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Blood Pressure

I AM IN receipt of a little book, one of a series published called "Help Your Doctor To Help You When You Have High Blood Pressure." It discusses in a helpful and sensible way such subjects as what causes high blood pressure, the symptoms of high blood pressure, what is normal blood pressure and treatment. Under causes of high blood pressure, a great emphasis is put on heredity, although this operates in a quite a hit and miss fashion.

One sensible paragraph begins: "Patient with hypertension often keep going from doctor to doctor asking for some treatment that will knock the pressure down, but it is doubtful if they ever get much benefit from the drugs that are taken, because even when the pressure is lowered for a while it usually soon goes back up to where it was before. The point to be remembered is that if one has high blood pressure of the essential type one is likely to have it for all one's days."

In reviewing the subject of high blood pressure recently I found that surprisingly enough nobody knew the incidence of high blood pressure. By this I mean nobody has ever recorded how many people at the age of 50, for instance, have a blood pressure of over 150. There was plenty of work to show what the average blood pressure of a group of people at the age of 50 was, but not the incidence of hypertension.

The only information we have is the report of the insurance companies which did not represent a cross section of the entire population because insurance applicants obviously are people who think themselves in good health. In order to supplement this, with the help of some of my doctor friends I gathered together about 2000 records of people at all ages, most of whom were sick enough to consult a doctor.

We took the figure of 150—systolic blood pressure—as being the upper limit of normal. We found that over 40 per cent of people aged from 50 to 54 had a blood pressure of 150 or over. This would indicate that high blood pressure is a physiological rather than a diseased condition—simply a part of the aging process.

This would also indicate that drastic measures to reduce blood pressure are not likely to have much success. The treatment recommended in this little book consists of general measures for reducing the pressure of life, particularly getting plenty of rest and plenty of sleep. The diet recommended is liberal, including everything from meat to starches. Drugs are not advised except in special cases.

The last paragraph is called "Is There Any Hope on the Horizon for Persons with Hypertension?" The belief is expressed that from the amount of research work which is now being done, in the near future some method will be found effective in lowering pressure and preventing the high blood pressure of middle age. "Sufferers with hypertension must not, then, get too discouraged, but must cling to hope."

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Explains Sending Dr. Twitchell to Spencer, Who Tells Her He Suspects Milner at the Lansfield.

I RAISED myself to a sitting posture as I spoke, and my father steadied me as I rose from the couch and recovered my shoes.

"Yes," my father said, "I think explanation of that telephone call to Dr. Twitchell is sufficient warrant for delaying dinner, but all of you must have dinner immediately afterward. I can send Gus out for it right away to a restaurant I often patronize down here."

"You know my likes and dislikes as well as I do," I told him. "An appetizer or soup, meat or fish or shell food or chicken, one vegetable and a salad, a light dessert and plenty of coffee. You see I really am hungry."

"I'll see to it at once," he said, starting for the door.

"And I'll freshen up a bit while you're gone," I told him. When he had left I put on my shoes, washed my hands, put on a touch of powder and re-arranged my hair.

When my father came back I was waiting in a comfortable chair with another drawn up opposite me.

"Dinner will arrive in less than half an hour," he said. "I hope you do not mind dining by yourself, as I have already dined. There are many things I must talk over with Jack and Professor Diswell, and I must do it while they eat, for we must all get back to the hotel, so that you can get to bed, and have a good night's sleep."

"I don't feel as if I ever could sleep again in the Lansfield," I said impatiently.

"I suppose that is part of why you telephoned Dr. Twitchell. You'd better tell me about it now."

Explains Sending Twitchell "I'm not going to take up your time with all that happened at Dr. Diswell's cottage," I said. "Jack and Gus can tell you the whole thing better than I can—probably have already—and I simply am not up to it. But while I was there I asked the long distance operator to get me a list of all telephone calls received by Professor Diswell within the last twenty-four hours."

"There was only one," I continued, "and it came from a private line in what was a colonie irrigation is beneficial and why don't physicians suggest it or recommend it. Would it be in any way harmful if one has a chronic appendix?"

Answer: In my opinion, colonie irrigations sooner or later always do more harm than good and that is probably why physicians do not recommend them. There is no such thing as a chronic appendix.

vate unlisted number in Hotel Lansfield.

"So-o-o!" my father interrupted, with no tinge of surprise in his voice. "Did you get any other information?"

"I asked her what kind of voice it was," I answered, and then repeated the content of the operator on the "day-de-dah, womanish voice" of the man who had called.

"To me that signified but one person," I said, "and a number of suspicious circumstances I have encountered clicked into place as I mentally identified him as one in a key position in the hotel. That was the reason I telephoned Dr. Twitchell. I was afraid for my safety."

Milner Constantly Watched "I appreciate your solicitude, dear child," he said, then added astoundingly, "but it was entirely unnecessary. I suppose by key position you mean the office of hotel manager."

I stared at him in open-mouthed astonishment.

"You mean?" I gasped.

"That I have known of Mr. Milner's activities for some time; that by pretending to have the greatest confidence in him, and by appealing to him for aid at every opportunity, I not only have made him believe that he has me completely duped, but I also am giving him the traditional rope with which to hang himself."

"His every move is scrutinized. Some of his most trusted subordinates are in my employ. So one of the safest places in the world for any of us is Hotel Lansfield."

"Then," I said bitterly, "I succeeded only in making an idiot of myself."

"Never speak of yourself like that again," my father said sternly. "You did exactly the right thing according to the knowledge you had. But have no further concern. I have that hotel situation well in hand."

A knock at the door punctuated his assertion. When he opened it I heard the voice of one of his men, speaking in low but distinct tones.

"A call on your private telephone from U. H.," it said.
